

Biosketch – Ron Tuttle

Ron has nearly fifty years of professional experience in natural resources conservation, restoration, and management. Most recently a landscape architect with the Fairfax County Department of Public Works and Environmental Services, Storm Water Planning Division, where, as a senior technical specialist, he was instrumental in the introduction and integration of low impact development, stream restoration, soil bioengineering and other emerging technologies in Fairfax County. Prior to Fairfax County, his affiliation was with water and other natural resources conservation, restoration and management in the federal government and in private consulting. Departing the workplace in the summer of 2013, Ron and his wife Sarah are now enjoying their retirement and a second half century of marriage. He maintains his license as a Landscape Architect and a Fellow in the American Society of Landscape Architects (FASLA).
